USSR - Communist China: The Soviet Union has charged that Chinese troops have occupied six square kilometers of its territory, but claims to have only protested the incident so far.

The charge and its timing is probably intended to influence attitudes on the eve of the world Communist conference. The conference is scheduled to convene on 5 June, and the final preparatory meeting began yesterday.

The Soviets allege that the incident was precipitated by events on 2 May. Moscow is now asking advice of fraternal parties on how to proceed. Some parties--most notably the Italians--criticized both sides over the Ussuri clashes in March, and Moscow is apparently trying to gain maximum backing against the Chinese by proclaiming a policy of restraint.

the Sinkiang-Kazakhstan border was the scene of some sort of incident in early May; the Soviets leaked this version to Western newsmen in Moscow at that time. How closely the present Soviet version accords with the facts of the situation cannot be determined
